FORD SUED FOR ONE MILLION DOLLARS

BY AARON SAPIRO OF CHICAGO NO JEWS OR KLUXERS ON JURY

Manufacturer of "Lizzies," Is To Take Stand For Defense, But Will Be In Court Only When Testimony Is Desired — Senator James A. Reed Is Chief Counsel For the Owner of the Dearbourn Independent.

Six women were on the jury selected the second day of trial of Aaron Sapiro's million dollar suit Detroit, Michigan, against Henry Ford. Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond in instructing the jury, indicated the trial will require "several weeks."

The jury was sworn in a 4 o'clock. Attorneys Tuesday night agreed with consent of Judge Raymond, to permit Henry Ford to come to court only when he is desired as a witness. He will be allowed to remain away until requested to appear. His testimony, attorneys added, will not begin until next week, probably Wednesday or Thursday. Mr. Ford will appear voluntarily as a witness for the other side.

The jurors are: Mrs. Anna Konen, housewife; Herbert Schoenkals, hardware merchant; Carl P. Haig, retired clerk; Charles F. Daly, farmer, retired; Ernest Schwein, cafe employee; Mrs. Clara N. Hoffman, housewife; Mrs. Grace L. Stiles, widow; Charles, A. Parkhurst, dry goods merchant; Mrs. Anna C. Brown, housewife; Mrs. Grace A. Jewel, woman's wear; Mrs. Emma S. Clarkson, housewife.

Two jurors of Jewish parentage were excused, one for cause and one by peremptory challenge by Senator James A. Reed, Ford's chief counsel. One juror was challenged peremptorily by the plaintiff because he was a former Klansman.

Isaac Greenburg was challenged for cause by Senator Reed. He was excused. Senator Reed in a similar challenge of Louis Caplain said:

"It seems it would be unfair to a juror to be compelled to serve in a case where attacks on members of his own race might arise."

"Challenge denied," ruled the court. Greenburg had held that attacks on the Jewish race were regarded by him as manifestly unfair. He said he had been born in Poland 55 years ago. A real estate dealer told Senator Reed he had been born in Lithuania, of Jewish parentage, he added: "Yes I am proud of being a Jew, but that does not prejudice me. I pay no attention to attacks."

Attorney William Henry Gallagher's challenge of J. B. Garrison, postal clerk, for cause was denied.

Garrison had testified he was a "former Klansman." He finally was excused on Attorney Gallagher's first peremptory challenge. Mrs. Anna C. Brown replaced him in seat No. 7.

The realty man was excused by Senator Reed's first peremptory challenge. Mrs. Grace A. Jewel replaced him.

Mrs. Anna Abel, juror No. 1, was the first woman excused on a peremptory challenge. It was exercised by Attorney Gallagher. Mrs. Emma S. Clarkson took chair No. 1. The jury then was accepted by both sides.

The Ku Klux Klan issue was thrust into the trial shortly before the noon recess. William Henry Gallagher, Sapiro's chief counsel, in examining the prospective jury, asked:

"Is any male member of this jury a member, past or present of a secret order known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan?"

One of the eight men raised his right hand. He was Garrison, who said:

"I belonged to the Klan one or two years ago last September. I was a member for three months. I attended only one meeting. I do not belong now."

The jurors were examined first in a body by Judge Raymond. He set forth that he would prefer in this case to leave examination of jurors to counsel, but that the rule was that the judge must do this duty. He added, however, that he would depart somewhat from the ordinary procedure in permitting attorneys to follow his questions with further examination, provided the questions of counsel did not retrace ground covered by the court.

At the beginning of the second day of trial the plaintiff (Sapiro) was sworn in as an attorney of the federal court of this district. It was intimated he will share the legal activities of his side with his chief of staff Attorney Gallagher.

Prospective jurors heard the court read a long list of names to ascertain if they knew any of the persons indicated in the list. Among the names were those of former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois; Robert W. Bingham, Louisville editor; Eugene Mayer Jr., Bernard M. Baruch, Karl Williams, Sidney G. Rubenow and Arthur Ruel.

The jurors were asked by the court: "Would any of you be influenced by the wealth, standing or importance in this community or in the nation of any of the parties in this case?"

"Would you be prejudiced against any farm organization or cooperative marketing association?"

Again no reply. Mrs. Abel was excused when she said she was acquainted with Mrs. Henry Ford, that they belonged to a social association and that her friendship for Mrs. Ford would prejudice her in favor of the automobile manufacturer.

At the opening of Tuesday's session Judge Raymond denied a motion by Sapiro's attorneys to bar parts of the Ford amended plea of justification. The court held that such a motion if granted would violate an earlier court order. This decision apparently gave to Ford counsel wide latitude in presenting his defense. The court postponed decision on a motion on Sapiro's side to eliminate the entire plea.

TWO CHILDREN FOUND DEAD IN EMPTY HOUSE

Towels Soaked With Ether Found Wrapped Around the Heads of Children.

The bodies of two small children of Walter Scholl, Gary, Indiana, accountant, were found stuffed in a clothes closet Tuesday by police who broke into the house at the telephoned request of the stepmother who called from Chicago.

The children, Vivian, 8, and Donald 6, apparently had died from either administered late last week. Scholl could not be found.

Margaret Scholl, foster mother, had received a letter from Scholl in which he declared his intent to end his own life, but first wished to dispose of the two children.

Two ether soaked towels were found in the clothes closet. He rented the house a week ago, paying a full month's rent, saying he had to move in at once. No furnishings were found in the home.

A search is being made for the body of Scholl.

Mrs. Scholl was held at a Chicago police station when the authorities learned that Scholl was once sentenced to serve a term in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. The police feared Scholl might make an attempt to slay Mrs. Scholl.

Scholl was sentenced to the Ohio prison under the name of Edward King for obtaining money under false pretenses. The sentence was effective January 24, 1925. The record does not show why he was released.

The latter will pay her own attorney fees and the defendant the court costs.

There are millions of people in the world who never make a mistake—but there're all in the cemetery.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DINE LEGISLATORS

Majority and Minority Leaders and Speaker of the House Here Tuesday.

The chamber of commerce was gaily decorated in St. Patrick's colors for the "Love of Mike" whose birthday anniversary of Ireland's patron saint will be celebrated Thursday.

Sixty members were present. The meeting was turned over by President Thomas F. Jeffries to another Irishman, Walter Marion, Pickaway county's representative to the general assembly. Walter Dodd, of Toledo, majority leader, Frank Ward of Monroe minority leader and O. C. Gray of Cadiz, speaker of the House of Representatives were guests of honor of the chamber of commerce.

The speaker in outlining his address told his audience just what us fellows were up at Columbus for, and what we are doing. We don't want to divulge a secret, but we don't mind telling you that we are not loafing on the job; we are trying to shape laws and we like organizations like yours to make suggestions to us on any bill that comes up, in this cooperation we can act better as your servants.

There are always specific and definite things in a bill, which must be worked out before they are voted on and become laws. All laws are not popular, some are not workable, they must be tried out on the public, and if there are any faults in them, they are ironed out at the next meeting of the assembly, or are repealed.

Often when laws are passed the author cannot recognize his own child, as things are added and taken away that makes the bill finally emerge as a skeleton of its original self.

Representatives and senators are elected to pass remedial legislation, are often forced against their will to remain in session longer than they like. Most of the work of the legislature is done in the committee room and the final test of the law is given when the bill is put up for passage. We are glad when the legislature adjourns and we have discharged our duties to the public.

Parliamentary technique disappears in the committee, said Honorable Martin Dodd. Representative government never rises above the people it represents, it's better a thousand times, than an autocratic government. The happiest country is that, that has no history, because it has the greatest per cent of freedom.

Your state needs to be placed on a solid financial basis, sort of pay as you go, basis.

Frank Ward, of Monroe county, minority leader, said that people who were governed least, were governed best. We are doing our best for the people of the state of Ohio, and trying to live up to the promises we made in the campaign.

Walter Marion, representative from Pickaway, said that this was his first experience, that he did not want the farmer to jump on him when he came home and demand why he did not vote for this or that bill; now is the time to do your kicking. When the corn borer bill came up for its final passage, he did not hear from one farmer, the only message he received was a wire from a canner in this city. I am not asleep on my job, but it warms the cockles of your heart to hear from the folks back home, when a question of general interest comes up and you would like to know their opinions.

The meeting closed when the president of the chamber of commerce thanked members of the legislature for coming down and wisen us up on procedure of the legislature.

BEER AT COST, IS PLAN OF CAN- ADA'S PREMIER

"Workingman's Beverage" To Be Sold With Only Handling Charge Added.

Toronto, Ont., March 15.—Beer is to be regarded as a workingman's beverage under the new liquor control law and is to be sold at cost.
Premier Ferguson said today the government planned to derive no profit from the sale of beer and that only the necessary handling charges would be added to the cost of the product.
Permits, which will be necessary for the purchase of all liquor, will cost either $1 or $2. In the case of residents the permits will be good for one year and for tourists good for one month. The tourists' permits may be sold at a slightly lower rate than those for residents.
The premier said that due to the vast amount of detail necessary to put the new law into effect he did not believe it would become operative before May 15.

PLACED BETS

On the Pontes After Races Were Over.

Gambling has always been a favorite form of diversion among base ball players, according to an article in this week's Liberty by Hugh Fullerton, well known sports writer, who recounts an amusing case of gambling in which "Pop" Anson figured. Fullerton was at that time traveling with the old Chicago White Stockings, reporting the games.
"Anson, who was honest to the limit," Fullerton writes, "played poker, bet on his own team, and would wager on almost anything excepting horse racing. That he abhorred and he forbade his players betting on races. That led to one amusing incident.
"Anson was scolding his players," Fullerton tells, "telling them what suckers they were to bet on horse races, and he added: 'If you want to throw away your money, let's keep it in the family. I'll take your bets and give track odds.'
"I knew nothing of it at the time," Fullerton continues. "One afternoon one of the players walked out of batting practice, leaned against the press box, and said: 'Get me the result of the fourth race today.' When the result of the race came over the wire I scribbled the name of the winner and tossed it through the screen to the player. This was repeated several days until Anson came storming upon me, accusing me of abetting his players. The boys had been betting him on the bench after the races were run."

WRIST CORSAGE NEWEST ADORN- MENT FOR DANCER

Cleveland, March 13.—The wrist corsages, designed to withstand the most strenuous dancing is the latest style in flowers for public display.
Wrist bouquets will be exhibited at the Cleveland flower show the latter part of this month along with dainty corsages for the arm, shoulder and waist, according to Miss Hester Getz, chairman of the retail exhibit committee.
The ankle corsage so far has made little impression in Cleveland, Miss Getz said.

Agreeable New Contacts

By GRACE LEA

(Copyright.)
"MOTHER, suppose you and I go into business," announced Rosana Hickson.
"My dear!" retorted her parent with a dictionary of meaning in the two words.
"Oh, I know father left us very well provided for, and we don't have to do anything but live on in a genteel, lady-like fashion without working! But, mother, I'm fed up on this drab existence. Will you listen to my plan?"
Her mother could do no less.
"It almost seems as if this home were left to us for the purpose I have in mind. I want to take in automobile tourists, lodge them and give them breakfast—or other meals, if they like. We are right on the college highway and there will be no end of nice people who may want lodging between here and the northern points. I'd like to create a real home atmosphere so that they would come back again and you and I could make something and have a little pleasure in new contacts. What do you say?"
"It seems very strange, daughter."
"It seemed strange the first time you cast your ballot, didn't it, dear?" asked the persistent girl.
"It did," admitted the mother.
If she had only realized it, she was doomed to fall into the new business scheme, because Rosana had worked it out in detail long before she suggested it to her mother. She had secured estimates on another bathroom and the decorating of four old-fashioned chambers, the renovating of the overstuffed furniture and new curtains.
"All these improvements will make our home more attractive and enhance its value if we ever want to sell it," Rosana told her mother. "And I have some perfectly lovely decorations worked out. There will be a blue room, dainty and pretty as a picture and comfortable. And the yellow bedroom is to be done with ivory walls, yellow dotted swiss and painted furniture with rag rugs. Won't that be darling? The big living room where I shall make it a point to have the guests feel at home when they stop, will be wonderful. I shall keep a big log fire burning and there will be a fragrance of pine about the room that will linger in their memories. Each comfy chair will have a table beside it with a light and some books, ash trays for the men and everything comfortable after a drive. The long table behind the big chesterfield will be loaded with magazines and you and I will make it a point to create an atmosphere of hominess that will charm them. You know you have a remarkable personality, mother dear, if you will only not be quite so stiff with strangers."

Mrs. Hickson was almost enthusiastic when her daughter talked so vividly and it was only a short time after that that they found themselves welcoming their first tourists.
When the season was well on its way, the mother and daughter decided that their venture was to be a decided success and that they were both enjoying their days as they had never done before. Many a group of guests lingered far into the evening to sit by the fire and talk and the breakfast table was frequently a very merry meeting place, and friendly hands were extended as newly-made acquaintances parted.
The day that a tidy little coupe drew up under the old porte cochere and a slender, intellectual looking man stepped out, was a momentous one in Rosana's life. The stranger who sought lodging and traveled alone was a professor in a college far up in the mountains and he wanted to leave early the following morning so as to make the remaining trip before noon.
"I know I shall not want to leave this room at dawn," he told Rosana when she conducted him to the east room done in gray and violet. "These are my favorite colors."
Fate had so ordered it that no other automobilists sought the Hickson home that night, and as Rosana's mother sat by the fire only long enough to be polite, the two newly found companions spent an evening never to be forgotten. Of books and life and their mutual tastes they talked until it would have seemed that the professor was cutting his sleep very short if he needed to make so early a start the next day.
Fresh as a daisy and with an added sparkle of beauty in her eyes, Rosana said good-by to him just after the sun had risen and they had breakfasted together on the porch.
"You'll keep my room for me at Christmas time?" he asked.
"And if it snows?" Rosana queried.
"Whether or not it snows I'd like to stop here both on my way home from college and on my way back after the New Year," Professor Bowles said, definitely.
Rosana was sure, as she watched his car disappear down the avenue of old elms that he would return.
"How did you like our guest, dear?" her mother asked, pointedly, as Rosana had her second cupful of coffee.
"I—why I liked him very much, mother," she replied, blushing as she had never blushed over the score or more of young men who had stopped at their home. "And—he is coming back at Christmas—and the New Year."

Her mother nodded. "We are making new contacts, aren't we, daughter?" she asked, playfully.

HINTS ON BEAUTIFYING YOUR OWN HOME

BY KATHERINE WILSON LEE

So many women have the idea that it takes a lot of experience... or a special knack for decoration... to transform drab, uninteresting rooms into the colorful, picturesque rooms illustrated in the current magazines. But really it is quite a simple matter—with Duco. And you are just as resourceful and talented as thousands of other women who have had amazing success with a brush and a can of Duco.

Start on a few simple things. For instance, try painting the baby's old crib or high chair with a pastel shade of Duco. How about Powder Blue? Duco smooths itself out so easily that it takes no experience at all to do satisfactory work, and this finish dries so quickly that you do not have to hang a lot of "wet paint" signs around your home. In fact, in the case of the baby's crib, if you paint it in the morning, it will be ready for use again in the evening.

Then why not get one of those odd wood baskets or a hanging book shelf, and paint it a bright Mandarin Red or Jade Green to add a little arresting note of color to an otherwise one-toned room? Or if you want to follow the very latest idea and put color into your white bathroom, it's easy to paint a stool rose, or yellow, or blue, to match the figured design in your cotton window curtains.

By this time you will have found what fun it is to work with Duco, and you'll be getting more ambitious. I can imagine you buying a set of unfinished breakfast room furniture, table and chairs, and consulting color charts for shades to match your walls and general color scheme. Old blue and yellow... green and gray... delft blue and rose... orange and black—there are endless fascinating combinations of colors. And when you paint your set yourself, you will know it's different.

Now you look around and see an ugly old oak dresser. Remove the mirror, brackets and all, and paint the chest of drawers one of the soft pastel Duco shades—possibly French Gray or Nile Green. Then hang an oval shaped mirror from a harmonizing sink cord above the newly finished chest, and you'll be completely surprised at the remarkable improvement. If you have an old chipped iron bed, which doesn't match anything, paint it to match the new dressing table... and also a chair or two. Soon a lot of almost impossible-looking old furniture can be used again, and your bedroom will be just as charming as though you had purchased a matched suite costing many times the actual cost of the refinishing.

Perhaps the walls in some room are bothering you? Have you ever heard of the Tiffany finish—the mottled two-tone effect so popular now? It is easy to obtain this finish with Duco. Select a dark shade of Duco and apply one coat all over the walls. After allowing this to dry for half an hour or longer, apply a second coat of Duco of a lighter, contrasting shade over the first coat, working in squares of not more than eighteen inches. Take a dry sponge and go over the second coat of Duco (each square as it is applied) before it dries. The sponge absorbs some of the Duco, allowing the first coat to show through. You will find this treatment makes a very artistic background for any room.

Isn't your imagination beginning to work overtime already, discovering new ways in which you can use Duco to beautify your home? Remember it's not necessary to envy your friends their attractive rooms. It's just a matter of getting busy yourself.

THE MAN WITH THE HOE SAYS

There is nothing finer for cutting than the improved mourning brides or scabiosas. The lavender, rose and whites have become popular but the old-fashioned velvety blacks are still the most striking of the lot.

New plants worth trying for the flower garden are the Chinese forget-me-not, synynglossum amabile, and the new Sunshine asters.

There are several new squashes of small size excellent for the home garden now on the market. The old sweet potato or banana squash comes out in improved form. There are also pocket-sized Hubbards worth growing.

Start snapdragons early in a cool room. Let them grow slowly in the seed boxes. They will make up in speedy growth outside from a stocky start indoors.

MUSICAL AND TEA

The following is excerpted from a Lima, O. newspaper: "Complimenting Mrs. Collis A. Young, a recent bride, Mrs. Oscar N. Young, Mrs. O. V. McMillin and Miss Katherine Young received a coterie of two hundred friends for a musical and tea, Friday afternoon in the Young home, 430 South Charles street, from three until six o'clock. The affair was one of the most delightful social events of the Lenten season.

"Bowls and baskets of spring flowers were artistically arranged throughout the rooms while the appointments for the tea were in green and white colors.

"Musical numbers were given during the tea hours by Mrs. Ralph Shrider, pianist and Mrs. J. J. Pettler, violinist."

Mrs. Collis Young was Miss Bernice Aldenderfer of this city.

Improved Air Motor
A new mystery engine, the most powerful air-cooled motor in the world, underwent tests at an aeronautical plant in New Jersey recently by inspectors of the United States navy. The motor, which is of the radial type, developed 525 horse power and was reported to have run at full speed without any structural or mechanical failures showing. The motor will be used exclusively for the present for planes for the United States army and navy. It is expected greatly to improve the performance of torpedo planes, bombing planes and long distance scouting planes.

Kept Old Bells Ringing

Every night for more than 700 years the bells of the church in the village of Hailsham, England, have proclaimed the curfew hour, but the long record was almost broken recently through a strike of bellringers. A woman organist saved the situation by taking it upon herself to ring the bells for several weeks until the differences over the bellringers' wages could be adjusted.

One of the bells in the church tower has been used since 1198 and the church register dates back to 1553.

"JUST LIKE BLOOD RELATIONSHIP"

"My Affiliation with the First National has been just like blood relationship," said a depositor the other day.

That expresses our ideal of real banking service better than any other words we can think of. Rightly applied, banking service is very much a personal service and requires a definite, individual interest upon the part of the banker.

If you like that conception of banking you would find the friendly atmosphere of the First National very pleasing and our service quite efficient.

EDITOR SAYS
FARMER MUST BE SCIENTIFIC

To Become Successful, Diversified Farming is the Road to Wealth.

Diversified farming and many markets close at hand in the state prevented Ohio farmers from being victims of the unhappy conditions developed in the large agricultural states in the west, Leo L. Rummel, editor of the Ohio Farmer, told members of the Optimist club Tuesday at the luncheon at the Neil House, Columbus.

Products of Ohio farms are in demand at markets often only a few miles distant, and no section of the state depends on a single crop, he said. The result was in evidence last year when the dollar of the farmer in this state was equal in buying power to the dollar of the city residents, Mr.
Rummel explained.

Thirty per cent of the farm income of the state is from dairy products and the big industrial cities of the state absorb all products, supplying a daily dependable market. The income of Ohio producers last year for chickens was in excess of that received from the sale of hogs, he said.

He is concerned mostly with the development of the future. Ohio, he thinks, is certain to develop largely along industrial lines, but not in the large cities. Industry will be decentralized, shops and factories and mills will be in scores of the smaller cities and even in the smaller places where workers may own their own homes, he said.

That development will be at the expense of agriculture, because land now used for crops will be taken over for industry and homes the workers will require, Mr. Rummel said. That means a sharper contest in production and that there must be the greatest possible progress in scientific agriculture if it is going to meet and master the problems, he said.

FAULTY CHICK
FOOD STUNTS
YOUNG BIRDS

All Mash Ration Successful
in Three States Specialists Find.

Faulty rations cause vast numbers of chicks to die every year. A pullet once stunted with improper or spoiled feed will never get back to successfully compete with those who were hearty from the start.

The feed the chicks get from the beginning should be directed toward the eggs the pullets are expected to lay when they mature, Professor E.
L. Dakan, head of the department of poultry husbandry at the Ohio State university says.

The all-mash method of feeding chicks that has been perfected by the Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin agricultural Experiment stations makes it possible to feed the flock with more exactness. It also takes less time to care for them. It does not differ greatly from the scratch grain and mash method of feeding. The grain that is ordinarily fed whole or cracked is ground and mixed with the mash.

The formula recommended contains 70 pounds of ground yellow corn; 20 pounds winter wheat middlings; 5 pounds meat scraps containing 50 per cent protein; 4 pounds of raw bone meal, chick size; 1 pound of salt.

Feed this ration with nothing to drink but skim milk or buttermilk until the chicks are 10 to 12 weeks old.
Two per cent of cod liver oil should be added until the chicks are turned out doors.

Dinner and Dance Gowns
Stress Filmy Black Lace

Lace of every description for spring and summer, from the heavy Italian to the sheerest type of chantilly, so says the fashion forecaster. Outstanding is the all-black chiffon and chantilly frock, posed most frequently over a flesh-colored slip, of which the model in the picture is a most charming exponent. An advance style message from Paris stresses the trimming of the black lace frock with that of a different tint, either white, pale pink or beige.

Chartreuse Crystal and Pearls in Long Strands

Pearls continue to enjoy an unprecedented vogue, and, strange as it may seem, have lost none of their lure, as is usually the result of such circumstances. In order to correspond fully with the mode, chartreuse crystal is combined with them in long rope strands, short necklaces and the flat collar effects. Some of the open necklaces have graduated drops of the chartreuse crystal, others just tiny alternating ringlets. Earrings and bracelets combine the two in many new and attractive designs. One especially striking set consisting of earrings and bracelets is composed of large faceted crystals. The earrings are of the button type and are surrounded with a rim of seed pearls.
Seed pearls also compose the bracelet that is divided into sections by the large crystals.

Silk Fur Coats

Silk fur coats are popular again this year. Those made of antelope, kid, caracul, of leopard skin, gazelle or pony are particularly good. These are not necessarily expensive coats.
They are the pride and joy of those women who adore to look smartly dressed during the winter months and who can neither afford expensive furs nor can they undertake to carry them around the streets upon their slender shoulders.

Cannibal Mode Seen

Even the cannibal contributes something to the make-up of the modern English miss. The very newest evening frocks are very similar to those worn by the belles of the Solomon isles. Long ostrich plumes are substituted by the civilized Mayfairite for the tumeric leaves and hibiscus fiber of the dusky debutante. The bodice worn with the new feather evening dress is tight-fitting and made of embrodered chiffon.

Gleam of Gold

All that glitters may not be gold, but there is no doubt that so far as evening fashions go this is a winter when the gleam of gold and silver gives scintillant beauty to a mode that has infinite allure. Even the most simple gowns have intricate designs worked out in thousands of tiny crystals, while black or dark-toned velvets are effective backgrounds for motifs done in pearls or rhinestones.

New Fur Fashion

Spirals have come to be as well recognized a motif in the furrier's art as chevrons, which dominated fur garments for so long. One of the newest adaptations of this mode is shown in an evening coat of gold and silver mesh, trimmed with kolinsky. The huge stole collar forms a spiral, which connects with another spiral formed by the band at the hem.

Bustles Return

British dressmakers are placing bustles on the new evening frocks.
Those recently seen were made entirely of flowers of blending realistic shades of mauve, pink and purple with black centers. They made an attractive decoration.

For Older Woman

The older woman who wears the longer skirt suitable to her years may choose a gun-metal stocking with a black shoe or a very sheer black stocking that looks practically the same as gun metal.

ARMY BUCK PRIVATE
RADIO CORPS HEAD

How Love of Horses and Travel Brought Success.

Washington.—That a native of Boone county, Kentucky, should be a horse lover and also have a desire to travel is natural. That his twin desires should make him the glass of fashion and mold of form among the radio lightning jokers of Uncle Sam's army and give him claim to title as "first over and last back" buddy of the A. E. F. is not so obvious.

Yet it was love of horses and the desire "for to behold this world so wide" that brought Master Sergt.
Robert E. Williamson, signal corps, U. S. A., to his present job. He is section chief of the Washington nerve center of the army radio net that straddles the country, has feelers on the frosty northern rim of Alaska and outposts in the sun-drenched, equatorial southern Philippines, Panama and Porto Rico, and does some 800 messages a day in government business.

A friend told this Kentucky youth that the signal corps used quite a passel of horses and mules; and, back in 1914, he set out to investigate.
Presently Buck Private Williamson was in a signal outfit on Bedloe's island. Assignment to a field radio detachment sent him to the Texas border, where the road to two-striper promotion lay through learning what all the squeaky noises being pushed into and pulled out of the air were about.

By 1917 Corporal Williamson had found out. He went to France with the First division, stuck with it until after the armistice, and then went to Paris to help shuffle radio and telegraph traffic at the American embassy. He was among the last men of the A. E. F. to come home in 1923.

By that time the signal school at Fort Monmouth, N. J., was trying to standardize army radio technique. A survey picked Master Sergeant Williamson as an almost perfect code sender. His style was duly thumb-printed on phonograph records, which are now the main guide and instruction for army radio key pounders.

A year ago he was ordered to the Washington radio-dispatching office.

However far he may have wandered from the horse-wrangler dreams of his youth, he is officially rated as about the toppest tophand of the army at a radio key.

German Government Saves
Woman From Slave Block

Berlin.—In order to save a German woman from being sold in the open markets as a slave, the German minister stationed at Cabul was obliged to purchase her in the name of his government, setting a new precedent,
the New York Times learned.

Several years ago a native of Afghanistan, Abdullah Khan, who was living in Berlin, married a Berlin girl.
When inflation came on he, with his wife and children, returned to Cabul, where the family lived happily and prosperous.

Six months ago Khan died. When his wife applied to the courts for possession of his property she was informed that her late husband belonged to a mountain clan in Alfrided and as such was not subject either to the English or Afghanistan laws.

The clan, however, holds the old custom that the brother of the deceased gets all property, including the wife, which he is allowed to marry or sell. The brother offered marriage, which was rejected. He thereupon used the clan prerogative of bringing the wife to the auction block.

The German minister refused to disclose the purchase price, but it is said to be the highest ever paid in a Cabul slave market.

Job He Had 46 Years

Detroit.—Felix A. Lemkie is to be a candidate for justice of the peace.

He made the announcement on his eighty-first birthday, and as to his qualifications he offers to the voters of Detroit his record of 46 years of service in that position.

That 46 years of service came to a close in the spring of 1923 when he was defeated at the polls for the first time. Friends brought beautiful flowers and paid oral tribute to the record he had established. They told him what a remarkable old man he was, and then the curtain was lowered—it was believed forever —on the political activities and public service of Felix A.
Lemkie.

WHEN PIGS DIE
FARMERS LOSE
PORK PROFITS

Thirty-Two Out of Every Hundred Farrowed Die is the Average Mortality.

The cost of producing a hundred pounds of pork depends on the number of pigs saved in each litter. The farmer that saves the largest number of pigs in a litter has an advantage over his neighbor who loses several pigs in a litter.

Cost account records summarized by John F. Dowler, of the department of rural economics at the Ohio State university, show that high costs of pork production are always associated with a small number of pigs in the producer's herd.

Thirty-two of every hundred pigs farrowed died for Putnam county farmers keeping complete cost records in cooperation with the university and the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station last year. The records show, according to Mr. Dowler, that the heaviest mortality occurs during the first two weeks after farrowing. Most of the pigs lost their lives in the first few days.

Guard rails, good feed, clean bedding, and a few hours' time would save most of the pigs that now die
so early in life.

After the pigs have had time to learn to care for themselves the mortality was very low on these Putnam county farms. Farmers lost only one pig in a hundred from weaning time until they were sent to market. This includes their losses thru cholera this fall. The average number of pigs farrowed on the farms keeping cost accounts was 8.6. These litters dwindled to 5.4 pigs by the time they reached market.

MEMBERSHIP RECORD
SURE TO SET PACE

There were 70,000 more members paid up in the American Legion for 1927 on February 1 than the total number on the same date last year. The books of the national treasurer at Indianapolis, Ind., show, according to James F. Barton, the national adjutant. There were 50,000 more on the same date last year than on February 1, 1925, the first year in Legion history that such an increase was shown.

"This healthy membership condition indicates the Legion will go into the next convention in Paris in September with another record similar to the one last year, when, for the first time, an increase in total membership for the year was shown over the preceding year," Barton said. "In other words, the Legion, which started to grow in size last year, is continuing that growth."

Campaigns for renewals and new memberships started throughout the country immediately after the national convention in Philadelphia last October decreed that it should be a major objective this year. Numerous contests have been held, and others will continue until the Paris convention. Many of the states have made rapid advancement in this work. Florida, particularly, hung up an early record, having 88.88 per cent of its quota, as set by national headquarters, on January 31. Thirty-five of Florida's 86 posts had a 100 per cent or better membership, as compared with 1926, before the first month of the new year ended.

Other departments that had exceeded, or were close to 50 per cent of their quotas on January 31 were: Arizona, Canada, Idaho, Illinois and Minnesota.

One of the spectacular events in membership work was the holding of a state-wide radio initiation ceremony by the California department, February 22, at which several thousand new members were inducted into Legion service. Three broadcasting stations were used, one in San Francisco, one in Los Angeles and one on Catalina Island.

Death Takes Prominent Legion Committeeman

The American Legion lost an outstanding figure in the death of J. Leo Collins, an attorney of Pittsburgh, Pa., who died February 11 of meningitis. He was national executive committeeman of the Legion of Pennsylvania at the time of his death, and attended the recent meeting of the committee at national headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind. He was of forceful personality and took a leading, constructive part in many questions of national importance to the organization. Collins was Pennsylvania state commander of the Legion in 1923 and 1924 at the time he was elected national executive committeeman. He also was a member of the national legislative committee in 1926 and a member of the committee on national convention work for the same year.

Iowa Post Pulling Off
Elimination Tournament

The Waterloo (Iowa) post of the American Legion began in February staging an elimination tournament of boxers to last several months. The winner will gain the right to face Young Striding in a big outdoor boxing show in July, according to Maurice Cohn, matchmaker for the post.

"The elimination bouts will be held at intervals of three weeks," Cohn said in announcing the tournament, "and will bring together a number of leading light-heavyweights, including George Bourland, Chicago; Mike Mandell, Minneapolis; Joe Lohman, Toledo, and Mike Wallace, Cleveland."

Two "Father and Son"
Banquets in Minnesota

Members of the Fairmont (Minn.) American Legion post, discussing plans for the post's annual "Father and Son" banquet, could not decide whether the Legionnaires should be the fathers or the sons. Some wanted each member to bring his own son or a boy borrowed for the occasion. Others wanted each member to bring his father, or an older man. The matter was settled by deciding to have two banquets, one to carry out each idea.

ORIENTAL MOTH
HARASS PEACH
TREE GROWERS

Entomologist Claims That It Has Invaded Ohio Orchards
---Advises Spraying.

Stomach poisons will not control the new worm that has come to Ohio to harass the fruit growers.

The larva or worm of the Oriental peach moth mines the tender twigs of the tree and spoils the fruit by burrowing tunnels thru it around the seed, according to D. M. DeLong, entomologist at the Ohio State university. In all this digging they will not mallow any of the fruit or twig until they have reached the inner tissues. Poisons that control other chewing insects have no effect on them.

After the worm has entered the peach, it also becomes susceptible to the brown rot and together they destroy its value commercially. To make the entrance of the peach moth into Ohio fruit growing regions more serious entomologists in eastern states have reported that it also infests apples, pears, plums, quinces, and cherries. In Ohio the damage is especially heavy in apple orchards.

The only partially successful spray control found has been 40 per cent nicotine surfate diluted 1 to 800. It may be applied alone or with other fungicidal sprays. It is applied so it will come in contact with the eggs laid by the adult moth. The nicotine kills the eggs.

New Jersey experiments have found that six applications will be often enough to prevent the eggs from hatching that come in contact with the spray. This is necessary since there are three and four generations a season, Mr. DeLong says.

SALEM W. C. T. U.
The Salem Woman's Christian Temperance Union was pleasantly entertained Thursday afternoon, March 11, at the home of Mrs. Anna Rice.

The meeting opened by singing "Some Glad Day." Devotionals followed and Work for Enforcement Where You Are, was sung.

Twelve members responded with a scripture verse at roll call followed by a short business session. The topic for the afternoon was a study on Legislation.

Federal Legislation—12 Steps from a Bill to a Law, was given by Mrs. Lillian Hinton. Powers and Duties of the President of the United States, by Mrs. Louise Morris. Twenty Years of Prohibition Legislation by United States Congress, by Mrs. Will Evans, and Official Washington — The State Department, by Mrs. Bessie Miller. All members were urged by the President Miss Mary Harpster, to attend the county institute April 8 at Turlington. The meeting closed with a prayer by Mrs. Anna Rice.

During the social hour dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

SHORTS AND MIDDINGS

Americans eat three billion pickles a year. Eighty and a half million are grown annually in Ohio.

Says Sam: The individual who is forever "selling" ideas ought to be made to sell by grade.

The Ohio seed law only requires seed sold by companies within the state to be labelled telling the number of weed seeds and other foreign material. Seed shipped parcel post from other than Ohio cities need not be so marked, say chops specialists at the Ohio State university.

Heavy hens bring eight to ten cents a pound more than the light breeds on the market.

Specialization on farms is increasing and will continue to increase. Farmers are not specializing so much in one crop, but they are taking better care of two or three.—G. F. Warren.

LUMBERMEN FINDING THAT FORESTRY PAYS

Hard-Headed Business Men
Follow Lead of U. S.

Washington.—The illusion of inexhaustible virgin forests has spent itself and in the lumber business forestry has come to be the economic competitor of transportation, says W. B. Greely, chief of the United States forest service.

As long as cheap virgin stumpage was at hand within a reasonable distance of the lumber and paper markets there was no place for systematic timber growing in the economic scheme of things, the forestry expert declares in the annual report of the Smithsonian institution for 1925 just issued. Once the cost of transporting lumber from the nearest forest exceeds the cost of growing it at home, hard-headed business men realize that forestry pays.

Forest conservation in the United States has up to the present time been largely a matter of public ownership of timberland and public policies based on foresight of coming national necessity, Mr. Greely says. Now, however, it is percolating down into the counting house and directors' board rooms.

Must Provide New Supply.

As the timber shortage grows more critical the wood-using industries recognize the alternatives they face of either providing future raw material or going out of existence.

"Undoubtedly we must and will learn to use less wood," continues Mr. Greely. "Steel, cement and snap products have been substituted for construction lumber, and coal, oil and electricity are replacing it for fuel. But as these substitutions increase new uses for wood like that in the rayon textile industry are constantly being evolved out of the chemistry laboratory and the range of such wood-using products continues to widen."

Careful conservation of the timber we already have, elimination of forest waste to the last foot and generous growing of new trees point the way to the solution of our forest problem, declares the expert.

A research institution that has for its object the detailed study of all the known insect carriers of disease is a new project in science. A proposal of such a beneficent foundation has been made by Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the United States bureau of entomology.

Not only the insects of bad reputations of long standing, like the anophelines mosquito associated with malaria, but the close relatives of all the disease-bearing species should be studied in a well-equipped service "by competent men untrammelled in their work and assisted to the limit of their necessities in a financial way," declares Doctor Howard.

Organic chemistry as an aid to the entomologist in dealing with the insect pest problem was stressed by the well-known scientist in his report. Knowledge of the chemistry of the physiological changes that insects undergo is essential, he stated. Study of the chemistry of the plants on which they feed would help to give a clearer understanding of what there is about certain plants that attracts certain insects. Such problems would have a very important bearing economically on many crop pests.

Annihilation of injurious insects by poison gas is another phase of chemistry along the lines of which Doctor Howard believes valuable progress may be made in the future.

"We must look to the chemist," he declared, "for the development of the most perfect insecticide, which must be a cheap compound that will at once stimulate plant life and deter or destroy insects."

Reports Cannibal Butterflies.

Cannibal butterflies and caterpillars that give off electric shocks are among the phenomena of nature described by Dr. Austin H. Clark of the United States National museum in the report of the institution.

Certain butterflies found in the Orient and in our own New England reverse the usual vegetation habits of their kind and feed on plant lice and nearly bugs during the larval stage, says Doctor Clark. Little butterflies of the kind known as hairstreaks carry this practice to the point of attacking their own species during the helpless state of transition from the larva into pupa. Before the pupa case is hardened preparatory for the dormant period during the winter the insect is practically at the mercy of its fellows, who frequently fall upon it and devour it.

The "electric" caterpillars were found in Nigeria feeding on mistletoe flowers. While handling them the collector experienced a tingling sensation distinctly resembling an electric shock, explained Doctor Clark, though the insects had no bristles or other protrusions that would cause irritation.

Save the birds if you would save the crops, is the keynote of a report by W. L. McAtee of the United States biological survey.

This slogan is based on findings accumulated from extensive surveys of bird habits by experts throughout the country.

Indians in Cavalry

Washington.—There are now 25 full-blooded Sioux in the first squadron, Fourth cavalry, stationed at Fort Meade, S. D., post from which cavalry in the old days operated against the Indians.

AMUSEMENTS

Original stories written directly for the screen are replacing adaptations of novels, short stories and plays, believes Richard Dix, Paramount star whose latest picture, "Paradise for Two" opens today at the Met theater. The reason for this he maintains is a perfectly utilitarian one.

"In the early days of the motion picture," he says "the art went almost unrecognized in the entertainment world and the producer turned to the filming of a familiar play or novel for prestige. Now however the industry has advanced to the point where it need not borrow from any other form of art. It can stand alone on its record of achievement."

"With this change has come the realization too that writing for the pictures is totally different from any other form of writing. The motion picture writer must have first of all a pictorial mind. He must visualize his story and tell it in pictures. Many successful novelists and playwrights do not have this peculiar ability. They are concerned chiefly with word sounds and this 'fine writing' so necessary to literary success, is absolutely worthless in scenario writing."

"My latest Paramount picture, 'Paradise for Two' is a concrete example. It was never published nor did it ever play on the stage. An experienced screen writer, Howard Emmett Rogers, wrote it directly for the screen and Ray Harris and Tom Crizer wrote the scenario from it."

Betty Bronson is featured with Dix in "Paradise for Two" the story of a rich bachelor who wanted to stay single, but who was forced to hire a stage struck girl to pose as his wife so that he could collect his inheritance. Gregory LaCava directed with Andre Benger and Edmund Breese in important roles.

HARTMAN THEATER.

The Messrs. Shubert's "The Student Prince" will again offer its altogether bewitching melodic appeal to theatergoers at the Hartman theater next Monday night, for a limited engagement of three days with matinee on Wednesday.

This story of a prince who falls in love with a lowly commoner had a peculiar grip on theatergoers. It is one of several costume musical offerings that can be said to have a universal appeal.

It would be difficult to place one's fingers on the particular moments of the operetta which interest audiences most. Many theatergoers have seen it three and four times and found in each visit an added beauty that was overlooked on the previous visit.

There is no doubt but what Sigmund Romberg has composed a delightful score. There are so many numbers, which call for encores that to call the outstanding moment of the operetta would be an offense to the beauty of another number in the operetta. "Deep in My Heart, Dear," the love duet between the prince and Kathie has tender lilt. It practically acts as the theme of the romantic environment. "Golden Days," "Just We Two," "The Student's Serenade," "To the Inn We're Marching" and "The Drinking Song" all offer something to bring the audiences' hands together to demand encores.

The company this year will be headed by Lloyd Garrett, a young tenor who has received flattering commendation from both critics and public. Ruth Williams will be "Kathie." Margaret Cantrell as the princess and David Reese as "Detleff." Others are James Heenan, Gertrude Maitland, Emmy Niclas, Carl Formes, the third generation of a family of noted singers, Robert Grieg and Gus Alexander. There will be a student male chorus of fifty and an augmented orchestra of twenty.

UNUSUAL WEATHER

Conditions Played Havoc With Improved Roads In State.

Columbus, March 15.—Ohio's roads are probably in worse condition now than at any time since the improvement of the state's highways was gotten under way by the state highway department.

This condition is due to the abnormal weather conditions during the last seven months. There have been heavy rains and snows and deep freezes in the northern part of the state and alternating freezes and thaws in the southern section. According to state highway authorities there have been only two winters since the department was organized that have approached the present winter in severity.

Most of the damage reported, however, has been to highways constructed a number of years ago, which are of a lighter design than those now built. Some of the most serious damage has been due to the breaking of light pavements, earth slides, and slips which have carried part of the roadway with them, washouts and the breaking down of road shoulders.

Among the many highways in the state which are reported to have suffered especially from the adverse weather conditions are: Pike's Peak road in Champaign county; Three C's at Centerburg; Marysville-Kenton road, north of Marysville; Marysville-Columbus road north of New California; Delaware-Newark road, east of Delaware; Cincinnati-Hamilton road north of Mt. Healthy; Three C's in Warren county; National road between Etna and Kirkersville; Chillicothe-Washington C. H. road, Dixie Highway north of Sidney and others.

Lounging Pajamas Are Liked by Screen Star

"Select the color of your lounging pajamas," advises Dolores Costello, famous screen star, "as you would the color of a gown or hat." This charming suit which Miss Costello has selected to wear in "The Third Degree," is made of pale blue silk, her favorite color. She thoroughly believes that lounging pajamas which are of a color that is not in tune with one's temperament cannot be conducive to relaxation and rest.

Velvets in Colors Are in Season's Fashions

With the social season at its height, finds velvet in the position of great importance that was predicted for it in the early autumn. At the opera velvet is outstanding as the material chosen by many of the smartest women, who in a number of cases show a preference for shades of rose and red, or for black combined with white and brightened by touches of silver or crystal. A brilliant tone of blue also is much in evidence and an occasional wrap or frock of green velvet emphasizes the vogue of this particular color. It is noticed that with the tendency toward a more formal mode of dressing for afternoon occasions comes an awakened interest in rich materials that are adapted to fashions of this genre. Beautiful soft woollens lavishly trimmed with costly furs are used for many of the handsomest and smartest coats, but as a general thing one finds the use of velvet more pronounced.

Livid Orange Used for Contrast on White Suit

Livid orange used for contrast on a white wool suit made by Jenny is a guarantee that that particular costume shall not be lost against its background. The knee-length coat of heavy-knitted wool in white, with its collar buttoning high, is bound on all edges with orange leather, the binding extending back in points about four inches deep. The buttons, ranging in a close line up the front of the coat, are also of orange, in leather. Under this coat is worn a short skirt of the knitted white wool, with a jumper of orange jersey. The knickers of white jersey have long strips of the goods attached to be wound about the leg in the form of puttees.

Chiffon Scarfs, Long, Wide, Thin and Airy

Chiffon scarfs, long and wide, are so thin and airy looking that when spread out they look like a gust of wind. Fringe weighs down some of them while others have square corner motifs of metal cloth to serve the same purpose. Light-colored backgrounds enhance the colorful designs that represent modern art themes, tropical flowers and pastoral scenes. Those having backgrounds of what is called atmosphere, which is nothing more or less than a soft gray, favor the deep red, orange, green.

Collared Sports Frock May Be Spring Fashion

With the sports dresses are seen long flowing ties of gay prints. Most of these are in dark or very vivid colors in order to furnish contrast with the light colors of the frock with which they are worn. From all indications, the collared sports frock is to be an accepted spring style, with the consequence that ties will be seen. When a white sports dress is so colored, ties of different colors and to match a similar hat shade give the dress an entirely new character.

Satin and Taffeta

Frocks of satin and taffeta in beautiful evening shades are made on simple lines very straight and sheathlike and heavily trimmed with rows of bead fringe, showing much bright gilt, silver and crystal.

Mirror Jewelry

A new form of ornament called mirror jewelry is made of flat round disks of gold or silver linked together.

CARROLL APPEAL UP

Famous "Bathtub Party" Case Before U. S. Supreme Court.

Washington, March 15.—(UP.)—The appeal of Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, from his year and a day Atlanta Prison sentence for perjury, and the government's reply attacking the appeal as without merit, were presented today to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Decision as to whether a review is to be granted generally comes one to four weeks after presentation of appeals.

If the review is denied, the noted producer will have to start soon serving his sentence.

Carroll was host at a "bathtub party" in New York which resulted in his conviction after he had claimed there was no girl in his famous tub.

MAUDLIN JUSTICE

It is a sad commentary upon our present-day juries when, as occurred in the trial of William Angilan for the murder of a woman whose male companion he just had robbed of 75 cents, six men and six women, after having sworn under oath that they believed in capital punishment, and that they would not be swayed by sympathy, but would be guided solely by the evidence presented to them, returned a verdict recommending mercy, thereby saving the self-confessed bandit and murderer from the electric chair.

And this in the face of the fact that not a scintilla of evidence was presented in defense of Angilan's act, as against a multiplicity of evidence that he had admitted firing the fatal shot while perpetrating a robbery, in itself sufficient to warrant the death sentence, and with only the eloquence of his lawyers, pleading for mercy for one whose ignorance and environment were declared to be responsible for his acts, to sway them from the paths of justice.

Prosecutor Taft was justified in accepting lesser pleas for Angilan's fellow bandits, after the miscarriage of justice in the trial of their leader.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Peachey Gets a Promotion

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

PEACHEY WALTON had officiated behind the gilded wire of the cashier's desk in Roberts & Co.'s restaurant for five years. Her real "front name" was Mary Ellen; but they called her Peachey because of her peachblow complexion, which she retained unimpaired in spite of the fact that she had seen twenty-five years which she acknowledged—and two more which she ignored in the reckoning. Peachey was a wonder at figures; you could swear to all her accounts without checking them up—except her account of her age. She was efficient and well aware of her efficiency; good looking and well aware of her good looks; popular with the customers and proud of her popularity. She could give correct change for a two-dollar bill, exchange repartee with an old customer and sit on a young man inclined to "get fresh" at one and the same time. Her wages were fair; she supported her widowed mother and made her indolent younger brother work—the latter no small job.

Roberts had long ago died out of the firm of Roberts & Co.; and "Co."—whose other name was Perkins—was sole proprietor of the establishment, which boasted of giving the best cup of coffee for five cents that could be purchased for that modest sum on Manhattan island—to say nothing of Staten Island, Long Island and the Bronx. Mr. Perkins was getting along in years, but none of his employees ever thought of his ever retiring. Roberts & Co. without Perkins was simply a thing impossible to imagine. Then one day a great, big bomb fell into the establishment and blew up all ancient traditions. Mr. Perkins announced that he had sold out to a man named Thomas Carlingford.

The employees were all in a flutter. The restaurant of Roberts & Co. was an institution and a conservative one; and those who patronized it regarded any change in it as little short of sacrilege. They were all sure they were going to hate the new proprietor, who would probably be brimming over with innovations.

Thomas Carlingford appeared. He was a man in his late thirties. They had expected an older man. The changes he made were few and unimportant. Things jogged along as usual. In a month the regular customers were calling the new proprietor Tom. The cashier's department was the only one over which Tom exercised a painstaking and even nagging supervision. He was constantly hovering around Peachey's gilded cage and made her stay behind every afternoon, when the night cashier came on, and go over her accounts with him. He never called her Peachey, as the others did, but Miss Walton, and treated her with a formality somewhat marked. Peachey thought he might be "splendid" if he only were not so fussy. She wondered whether he suspected her of dishonesty that he was always keeping an eye on her.

Then one day when Tom and Peachey were in the proprietor's little office going over the accounts, he took what Peachey considered an unpardonable liberty. "Miss Walton," said he, "I must request that you will cease chatting with the young men patrons of this establishment when they go to pay their bills."

"My," said Peachey in surprise and not a little resentment, "I don't chat with them. They are regular customers—were here long before you appeared on the scene—and we just exchange a few pleasantries with each other. I don't see where the harm is."

"Well," replied Tom, frowning, "I don't like it. Let us go on with the accounts."

Peachey felt like telling Tom that he could keep his old job—she would have no more of it. But there was the mother to be considered and brother Bob was out of a job again.

There were tears in Peachey's eyes by the time she reached her own door—and then a smile broke over the face of Peachey. "Oh-golly," she said half aloud; "I wonder if I've hit it! If I have—oh, joy!" And she went into the house, astonishing her mother by breaking into song.

The more she thought of the matter the surer she was that she was right in her surmises, and entered the restaurant in an extremely cheerful state of mind the next morning. But her faith in her own prescience was badly shaken when Tom, in a solemn manner, called her into his office, and, after fidgeting a little, said: "Miss Walton, I have decided to get a new cashier."

Peachey looked at him hard. He seemed to be terribly embarrassed. "Why, what's the matter with me?" she asked.

"Oh, nothing," stammered Tom. "Only, you see—that is, I have another position in mind for you."

"Really? What is the pay? What is it?"

"As to the pay," said Tom, "there is no salary attached; but—but—oh, confound it! Can't you see? Haven't you understood? I want you to be my wife."

"And the reason you raised such a row about my talking with the young men customers was because—"

"Because I was jealous, I guess," replied Tom sheepishly.

"I guessed right, then," cried Peachey, and began to laugh. But Tom caught her in his arms and smothered her laughter with kisses.

Cleaning Leather Chairs

Leather chairs, which ordinarily are difficult to clean properly, can be treated with a simple preparation made from eggs. Simply beat the whites of three eggs in a dish, and rub the paste into the leather with a flannel cloth. The chair will soon shine like new. If the leather is black, a little lamp black should be added to the eggs, says Science and Invention Magazine.

They Were Home Birds

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

WHEN Willa Wentworth had had a few very successful years of interior decorating in New York the longing for home and all that home meant swept over her.

"Home Sweet Home," she had written back to the folks at home in a thriving young midwestern city. "I'm coming along as soon as I can arrange it and build up my business there near you. I have saved a considerable sum to start with but know it won't take long—not with the New York stamp to my credit."

So Willa had stepped off the train from the East and into the arms of her devoted family. She almost took their breath away with her lovely clothes and the undoubted joy of home-coming.

"You've not grown away from us then, dearie, with all your success," said the fondest of mothers.

"Our Willa isn't that kind," said her father. "I always knew she'd fly home to the nest."

"We haven't even pulled down your old play house that—"

"And I'm glad you haven't," interrupted Willa, "because all the way out on the train I was thinking that it could be turned into an adorable studio-shop—that is, with slight improvements."

"You'll have to get the original builder to put on the additions," laughed Irma, the younger sister. "You decorators can't mix up your period design, you know."

Willa laughed heartily. "You were too young so you won't remember the designer of that play house—it was Lanky Dickinson, mother. You'll remember him—I seem to see him now with his long legs and lanky black hair."

"His folks still live in the old house," said Mr. Wentworth. "I hear Lanky has turned architect and has made good somewhere or other. He'd certainly be proud to see his first effort at building."

"I'd simply love to have him see it," laughed Willa, and in her eyes was the memory of that fine lanky boy who had been her playmate.

"He's hardly been home except for short visits while making his name and fortune," her mother told her. "And now, we'll have to be busy planning some grand parties to show off our own homing bird."

And so the next few weeks were spent in a round of the most wonderful times that Willa had enjoyed for five long years.

Certainly the passing of a few years had not severed the bonds of love, and Willa found herself the center of a most devoted colony of friends.

Then, the urge to get to work again assailed her and she inspected the little old play house.

Lanky Dickinson had built it, and even then in his teens had shown promise of the big work he was to do in later life as an architect.

Willa gazed at the quaint little fire-place, the small windows draped in some lace that her mother had salvaged from the scrap bag, the small door on real hinges and the porch. That porch had been Lanky's special pride, and he and Willa had planted a tiny shoot of rambling rose with hopes that had been more than realized. It had been only with generous pruning that the rose had been prevented from swamping the entire dwelling with crimson flowers.

As Willa stood contemplatively within her old play house where she and Lanky had spent so many joyous days a rush of memories swept over her.

"I simply won't have anyone but Lanky touch this place. If he's not to be found I will just build an entire new one," she told herself, and wondered how best to get in touch with Lanky.

The problem solved itself for Lanky, now known as Lawrence Dickinson, had also come home.

Willa was making a before-break fast tour of the dew-laden garden when looking up she saw a long-legged man with a strand of black hair straggling across the sunniest of blue eyes gazing at her over the hedge.

"Lanky!"

"Snubs!"

A second later he was over the hedge and was holding both of Willa's hands and looking into her eyes with much the same look he had always kept for Snubs when they had played at sweethearts in days gone by.

"But I'm not Snubs anymore," said Willa blushing hotly. "I'm Miss Willa Wentworth, Decorator."

Lanky laughed a boyish, warm-hearted laugh. "And I am not Lanky. Miss Wentworth, but Lawrence Dickinson. Architect, F. L. G. P. H. I. etc., etc."

They both laughed and unconsciously moved toward the play house of memories.

"Lanky—I want it made a bit bigger and I don't want anyone but you to—"

"Snubs—If you let anyone but me build a stick on that house I'll—"

"Mind your head, Lanky—remember you've grown upward a bit."

"Upward maybe but not away," said Lanky, when they were both within the tiny house, "and remember, Snubs, you were my sweetheart then and I'm not giving up anything that was mine."

"I don't want you to," said Willa.

FEDERATION WOMEN'S CLUB TO MEET HERE

The South-Eastern District Confederation of Women's Club to Meet Here.

A coming event of interest to the Monday club and to Pickaway county is the conference of the Southeastern District of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs.

This meeting will be held in Circleville early in November. The conference met here once before in 1918, when Miss Nell Weldon was vice president of the district and presided at the meetings of the conference and Mrs. Charles May was president of the Monday club.

The southeastern district comprises the counties of Athens, Fairfield, Gallia, Jackson, Lawrence, Meigs, Perry, Pickaway, Pike, Ross, Scioto and Vinton, thirteen in all.

There are seventy-five federated clubs in the district and each club is entitled to two delegates. In addition there will be present at the conference the district officers, the president and other members of the state board and visitors making conference group of about two hundred visiting women.

The 1926 conference was held in Nelsonville, Athens county, and was attended by four members of the Monday club Mrs. E. F. Anderson, Mrs. G. I. Nickerson, Mrs. Carl Ritz and Mrs. W. L. Mack. Mrs. Anderson as president, extended the invitation of the Monday club to hold the 1927 conference in Circleville.

Nelsonville has four federated clubs and these were assisted in the entertainment of the conference by the chamber of commerce, Rotary club, Automobile club, D. A. R., and other local organizations.

One of the interesting features of the meeting was the unique souvenirs presented to the guests, calling their attention to the coal fields, apple orchards, shoe factories and other industries of the county.

It is hoped that Pickaway county may thus demonstrate its superiority in canning factories, commercial flower and vegetable gardens, packing plants and other successful and prosperous industries.

Mrs. J. H. Morrow of Wellston, district vice president, is expected to spend a day in Circleville soon, as the guest of the members of the executive committee on the Monday club and in consultation with them as to arrangements for the conference.

The program is not yet announced except that the state president, Dr. Josephine Pierce, of Lima, will deliver an address.

MISS BANNING EVANGELIST A DRAWING CARD

Miss Banning's subject Tuesday evening at the Calvary Evangelical church was "The heart is Deceitful above all Things, and Desperately Wicked, Who can Know it?"

God says you don't know it and men say, "I guess I do. If I don't know my own heart who does?" The Bible is a mirror in which you can reveal the interior of your heart. "From the sole of the feet to the crown of the head the sinner is full of wounds and bruises and sores. 'The lips are full of lies.'"

Holiness is bought in heaven, it is eternal and it is going back to God. After you are converted you will slide back unless you are saved fully and to the uttermost you are not safe.

Six women were on the jury selected the second day of trial of Aaron Sapiro's million dollar suit Detroit, Michigan, against Henry Ford. Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond in instructing the jury, indicated the trial will require "several weeks."

The jury was sworn in a 4 o'clock. Attorneys Tuesday night agreed with consent of Judge Raymond, to permit Henry Ford to come to court only when he is desired as a witness. He will be allowed to remain away until requested to appear. His testimony, attorneys added, will not begin until next week, probably Wednesday or Thursday. Mr. Ford will appear voluntarily as a witness for the other side.

The jurors are: Mrs. Anna Konen, housewife; Herbert Schoenkals, hardware merchant; Carl P. Haig, retired clerk; Charles F. Daly, farmer, retired; Ernest Schwein, cafe employee; Mrs. Clara N. Hoffman, housewife; Mrs. Grace L. Stiles, widow; Charles A. Parkhurst, dry goods merchant; Mrs. Anna C. Brown, housewife; Mrs. Grace A. Jewel, woman's wear; Mrs. Emma S. Clarkson, housewife.

Two jurors of Jewish parentage were excused, one for cause and one by peremptory challenge by Senator James A. Reed, Ford's chief counsel. One juror was challenged peremptorily by the plaintiff because he was a former Klansman.

Isaac Greenburg was challenged for cause by Senator Reed. He was excused. Senator Reed in a similar challenge of Louis Caplain said:

"It seems it would be unfair to a juror to be compelled to serve in a case where attacks on members of his own race might arise."

"Challenge denied," ruled the court. Greenburg had held that attacks on the Jewish race were regarded by him as manifestly unfair. He said he had been born in Poland 55 years ago. A real estate dealer told Senator Reed he had been born in Lithuania, of Jewish parentage, he added: "Yes I am proud of being a Jew, but that does not prejudice me. I pay no attention to attacks."

Attorney William Henry Gallagher's challenge of J. B. Garrison, postal clerk, for cause was denied.

Garrison had testified he was a "former Klansman." He finally was excused on Attorney Gallagher's first peremptory challenge. Mrs. Anna C. Brown replaced him in seat No. 7.

The realty man was excused by Senator Reed's first peremptory challenge. Mrs. Grace A. Jewel replaced him.

Mrs. Anna Abel, juror No. 1, was the first woman excused on a peremptory challenge. It was exercised by Attorney Gallagher. Mrs. Emma S. Clarkson took chair No. 1. The jury then was accepted by both sides.

The Ku Klux Klan issue was thrust into the trial shortly before the noon recess. William Henry Gallagher, Sapiro's chief counsel, in examining the prospective jury, asked:

"Is any male member of this jury a member, past or present of a secret order known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan?"

One of the eight men raised his right hand. He was Garrison, who said:

"I belonged to the Klan one or two years ago last September. I was a member for three months. I attended only one meeting. I do not belong now."

The jurors were examined first in a body by Judge Raymond. He set forth that he would prefer in this case to leave examination of jurors to counsel, but that the rule was that the judge must do this duty. He added, however, that he would depart somewhat from the ordinary procedure in permitting attorneys to follow his questions with further examination, provided the questions of counsel did not retrace ground covered by the court.

At the beginning of the second day of trial the plaintiff (Sapiro) was sworn in as an attorney of the federal court of this district. It was intimated he will share the legal activities of his side with his chief of staff Attorney Gallagher.

Prospective jurors heard the court read a long list of names to ascertain if they knew any of the persons indicated in the list. Among the names were those of former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois; Robert W. Bingham, Louisville editor; Eugene Mayer Jr., Bernard M. Baruch, Karl Williams, Sidney G. Rubenow and Arthur Ruel.

The jurors were asked by the court: "Would any of you be influenced by the wealth, standing or importance in this community or in the nation of any of the parties in this case?"

"Would you be prejudiced against any farm organization or cooperative marketing association?"

Again no reply. Mrs. Abel was excused when she said she was acquainted with Mrs. Henry Ford, that they belonged to a social association and that her friendship for Mrs. Ford would prejudice her in favor of the automobile manufacturer.

At the opening of Tuesday's session Judge Raymond denied a motion by Sapiro's attorneys to bar parts of the Ford amended plea of justification. The court held that such a motion if granted would violate an earlier court order. This decision apparently gave to Ford counsel wide latitude in presenting his defense. The court postponed decision on a motion on Sapiro's side to eliminate the entire plea.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DINE LEGISLATORS

Majority and Minority Leaders and Speaker of the House Here Tuesday.

The chamber of commerce was gaily decorated in St. Patrick's colors for the "Love of Mike" whose birthday anniversary of Ireland's patron saint will be celebrated Thursday.

Sixty members were present. The meeting was turned over by President Thomas F. Jeffries to another Irishman, Walter Marion, Pickaway county's representative to the general assembly. Walter Dodd, of Toledo, majority leader, Frank Ward of Monroe minority leader and O. C. Gray of Cadiz, speaker of the House of Representatives were guests of honor of the chamber of commerce.

The speaker in outlining his address told his audience just what us fellows were up at Columbus for, and what we are doing. We don't want to divulge a secret, but we don't mind telling you that we are not loafing on the job; we are trying to shape laws and we like organizations like yours to make suggestions to us on any bill that comes up, in this cooperation we can act better as your servants.

There are always specific and definite things in a bill, which must be worked out before they are voted on and become laws. All laws are not popular, some are not workable, they must be tried out on the public, and if there are any faults in them, they are ironed out at the next meeting of the assembly, or are repealed.

Often when laws are passed the author cannot recognize his own child, as things are added and taken away that makes the bill finally emerge as a skeleton of its original self.

Representatives and senators are elected to pass remedial legislation, are often forced against their will to remain in session longer than they like. Most of the work of the legislature is done in the committee room and the final test of the law is given when the bill is put up for passage. We are glad when the legislature adjourns and we have discharged our duties to the public.

Parliamentary technique disappears in the committee, said Honorable Martin Dodd. Representative government never rises above the people it represents, it's better a thousand times, than an autocratic government. The happiest country is that, that has no history, because it has the greatest per cent of freedom.

Your state needs to be placed on a solid financial basis, sort of pay as you go, basis.

Frank Ward, of Monroe county, minority leader, said that people who were governed least, were governed best. We are doing our best for the people of the state of Ohio, and trying to live up to the promises we made in the campaign.

Walter Marion, representative from "Tick-way," said that this was his first experience, that he did not want the farmer to jump on him when he came home and demand why he did not vote for this or that bill; now is the time to do your kicking. When the corn borer bill came up for its final passage, he did not hear from one farmer, the only message he received was a wire from a canner in this city. I am not asleep on my job, but it warms the cockles of your heart to hear from the folks back home, when a question of general interest comes up and you would like to know their opinions.

The meeting closed when the president of the chamber of commerce thanked members of the legislature for coming down and wising us up on procedure of the legislature.

TWO CHILDREN FOUND DEAD IN EMPTY HOUSE

Towels Soaked With Ether Found Wrapped Around the Heads of Children.

The bodies of two small children of Walter Scholl, Gary, Indiana, accountant, were found stuffed in a clothes closet Tuesday by police who broke into the house at the telephoned request of the stepmother who called from Chicago.

The children, Vivian, 8, and Donald 6, apparently had died from either administered late last week. Scholl could not be found.

Margaret Scholl, foster mother, had received a letter from Scholl in which he declared his intent to end his own life, but first wished to dispose of the two children.

Two other soaked towels were found in the clothes closet. He rented the house a week ago, paying a full month's rent, saying he had to move in at once. No furnishings were found in the home.

A search is being made for the body of Scholl.

Mrs. Scholl was held at a Chicago police station when the authorities learned that Scholl was once sentenced to serve a term in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. The police feared Scholl might make an attempt to slay Mrs. Scholl.

Scholl was sentenced to the Ohio prison under the name of Edward King for obtaining money under false pretenses. The sentence was effective January 24, 1925. The record does not show why he was released.

THE MAN WITH THE HOE SAYS

There is nothing finer for cutting than the improved mourning brides or scabiosas. The lavender, rose and whites have become popular but the old-fashioned velvety blacks are still the most striking of the lot.

New plants worth trying for the flower garden are the Chinese forget-me-not, synoglossum amabile, and the new Sunshine asters.

There are several new squashes of small size excellent for the home garden now on the market. The old sweet potato or banana squash comes out in improved form. There are also pocket-sized Hubbards worth growing.

New Iceland poppies rivaling the Shirley keep coming to us each year. Sown early, these may be grown as annuals for fall flowers and they they will be ready to bloom bright and early again next spring.

Start snapdragons early in a cool room. Let them grow slowly in the seed boxes. They will make up in speedy growth outside from a stocky start indoors.

Jerusalem cherries for Christmas decorations are easily raised from seed. It is merely a pepper with round fruits. Start a packet this spring.

Order Golden Bantam corn early. The demand increases each season. Try some of its hybrids which take the yellow color and much of the quality into larger cobs.

MUSICAL AND TEA

The following is excerpted from a Lima, O., newspaper:

"Complimenting Mrs. Collis A. Young, a recent bride, Mrs. Oscar N. Young, Mrs. O. V. McMillin and Miss Katherine Young received a coterie of two hundred friends for a musical and tea, Friday afternoon in the Young home, 430 South Charles street, from three until six o'clock. The affair was one of the most delightful social events of the Lenten season.

"Bowls and baskets of spring flowers were artistically arranged throughout the rooms while the appointments for the tea were in green and white colors.

"Musical numbers were given during the tea hours by Mrs. Ralph Shrider, pianist and Mrs. J. J. Pettler, violinist."

Mrs. Collis Young was Miss Bernice Aldenderfer of this city.

The motor, which is of the radial type, developed 525 horse power and was reported to have run at full speed without any structural or mechanical failures showing. The motor will be used exclusively for the present for planes for the United States army and navy. It is expected greatly to improve the performance of torpedo planes, bombing planes and long distance scouting planes.

Kept Old Bells Ringing

Every night for more than 700 years the bells of the church in the village of Hailsham, England, have proclaimed the curfew hour, but the long record was almost broken recently through a strike of bellringers. A woman organist saved the situation by taking it upon herself to ring the bells for several weeks until the differences over the bellringers' wages could be adjusted.

One of the bells in the church tower has been used since 1198 and the church register dates back to 1558.

"JUST LIKE BLOOD RELATIONSHIP"

"My Affiliation with the First National has been just like blood relationship," said a depositor the other day.

That expresses our ideal of real banking service better than any other words we can think of. Rightly applied, banking service is very much a personal service and requires a definite, individual interest upon the part of the banker.

If you like that conception of banking you would find the friendly atmosphere of the First National very pleasing and our service quite efficient.
